

Something spectacular

Bordered by a serene bush backdrop, this pool has been designed to make the most of its beautiful surrounds

Space Landscape Designs was involved in the creation of a truly unique Australian swimming pool. Working with the different levels of the landscape, a stunning tiled wet edge pool maximises the beauty of the surrounding native bushland. The wet edge gives the impression that the swimming pool flows into the tall eucalypt forest in the distance.

The random mosaic Bisazza tiles (Ilaria Aqua) selected by Space Landscape Designs produce a glistening glass-like effect, reflecting the forest canopy as a mirror image of what lies in the distance. The mix of black, blue and silver tiles creates a luxurious feel, inviting all who see the pool to dive straight in.

The combination of coloured tiles is a clever design tool used by the designers at Space Landscape Designs, as the variety creates a sense of movement. Bisazza is renowned for its quality products and was Space Landscape Design's first choice when approached by the client to select the design finishes. The result is stunning and classic, ensuring this swimming pool is enjoyed for many years to come.

When it came to the product selection for the pool surround, Space Landscape Designs wanted something that wouldn't distract from the pool but complement it. Stone Outdoors pavers were chosen for the wide range of sizes, colours and surface finishes. For this design, the Ashmont was used as the light grey contrasts perfectly with the intense colours of the swimming pool interior. A large-format paver in the Classic finish was also chosen for its unique, subtle texture that performs well around a pool.

Hardwood decking was used in the design on the lower level as a practical choice as well as a material that differentiates between the entertaining platforms. The timber ties in nicely with the surrounding bushland and provides another natural element to the landscape.

Planting was kept to a minimum in this design, utilising the backdrop of existing natural bush landscape. Where garden beds have been used, plants have been chosen to complement the bush, rather than detract from it. Strappy grass-like plants work best, with a focal plant being a mature Xanthorrhoea and frangipani.

For a similar reason, glass balustrade fencing was chosen, ensuring the view out into the bush is not impeded, bringing focus onto the pool's relationship with the natural environment.

Before choosing a pool builder, make sure you have the right design. Having an expert involved from the design stage means that the completed swimming pool will be in harmony with the surrounds and results in an attractive and useful poolside space. A pool designer will also ensure your swimming pool design complies with council regulations and that it optimises the site to achieve your desired pool.

A client will benefit from a professional designer's knowledge. The designer realises the importance of incorporating the home and outdoor entertaining areas with the new swimming pool and landscape.

Swimming pool design is about creating a balance between aesthetics and function. The pool should be an asset to the property, so it is essential that the pool looks impressive even when it's not being used for swimming.

Space Landscape Designs uses its knowledge of space and aesthetics to position a swimming pool in the most suitable area, ensuring the look and style of the pool best suits the new or existing garden.
